The President's Message

Dear Esteemed OICOA Members and Colleagues,

I am pleased to address you through the February 2026 edition of the OICOA Newsletter. As we move further into the year, I extend my sincere wishes for health, peace, and continued success to you all. I hope that this season of reflection and mercy will deepen our shared commitment to justice, good administration, and the protection of human rights across the OIC geography.

January has been an active and productive month for the Ombudsman Institution of Türkiye. During this period, we maintained close engagement with national and international partners, and continued our interaction with academia, civil society, the media, and youth. These efforts reflect our understanding of the Ombudsman as a mechanism grounded in fairness, compassion, accountability, and respect for human dignity, while firmly upholding independence and impartiality.

In an increasingly complex global environment, the role of Ombudsman as a bridge between citizens and public administrations is more important than ever. As members of the OIC Ombudsman Association, we share a common responsibility to uphold human dignity, strengthen fairness, and promote the principles of good administration through cooperation and mutual support.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to all Member Institutions for their valuable contributions to our Association and for their continued cooperation. I am confident that, through mutual understanding and collective effort, we will further enhance the visibility, effectiveness, and impact of Ombudsman Institutions within the OIC framework.

I extend my warm regards and best wishes to you all.

The Secretary General's Message

Esteemed OICOA Members and Colleagues,

Recent activities for the month of January undertaken by OICOA Members have reflected the breadth of responsibility carried by our member institutions, particularly in contexts where administrative accountability and the protection of rights intersect in tangible ways. The work undertaken across jurisdictions continues to demonstrate that effective oversight is grounded not only in mandate, but in consistency of action and clarity of purpose.

I wish to acknowledge the initiative of the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of the Republic of Azerbaijan in conducting an unannounced visit to a temporary detention facility under the State Tax Service. Such inspections, especially when carried out without prior notice, are essential to preserving the credibility of preventive mechanisms. They reinforce the principle that safeguards must remain active in practice, not merely established in law. From the standpoint of tax administration, this approach is particularly significant, as it affirms that enforcement environments must remain subject to the same standards of dignity, transparency, and accountability that govern all public institutions.

I also wish to acknowledge the presentation of the Annual Report 2024 to the Parliament of the Kingdom of Morocco by Hon'ble Mr. Hassan Tariq. The report provides a clear account of the Institution's workload over the past year, with a substantial number of cases addressed through both formal complaints and mediation. The concentration of matters relating to administration, finance, and estates points to the areas where public interaction with state institutions remains most active. It is encouraging to note the attention given to follow-through, particularly in ensuring that recommendations are acted upon and decisions are implemented within reasonable timeframes. This reflects a steady and disciplined approach to handling public grievances.

I would also like to appreciate the continued engagement between the Inspectorate General of Government of Uganda and the World Bank, which points to the importance of sustained institutional partnerships in strengthening anti-corruption frameworks. The emphasis on investigative capacity, digital transformation, and coordinated oversight reflects a practical understanding that accountability mechanisms must evolve alongside the systems they regulate.

It was also a privilege for me to convene the 31st Meeting of the Forum of Pakistan Ombudsman in Islamabad. The discussions brought together the Federal and Provincial Ombudsman institutions of Pakistan to review ongoing work in complaint handling, coordination, and service delivery. I found the deliberations extremely insightful, with a clear focus on how existing processes can be improved and made more accessible to the public. I am grateful to all Pakistani Members from OICOA who took part and contributed their time and insight to the highly productive proceedings.

I am hopeful that this issue will be read with interest across OICOA Members, not only as a record of recent activities, but also as an opportunity to consider how colleagues in other jurisdictions are approaching their responsibilities. There is always value in seeing how institutions respond to different circumstances, and I trust that the activities featured in this issue will offer useful insight for our members in their own settings.

With warm regards,

Zafar Hijazi
SECRETARY GENERAL - (OICOA)
FEDERAL TAX OMBUDSMAN OF PAKISTAN

From the Desk of Executive Secretary

Distinguished OICOA Board Members,

I would like to begin by congratulating the OICOA President and Chief Ombudsman of Türkiye, Hon'ble Mr. Mehmet Akarca, for convening the recent conference on representation abroad and the observance of diplomatic courtesy and protocol. The focus of the conference speaks to a less examined, yet important, dimension of public administration: how institutions present themselves beyond their borders, and how that presence shapes both perception and trust.

In Azerbaijan, the Office of the Human Rights Commissioner, led by our Board Member Hon'ble Ms. Sabina Aliyeva, has remained engaged in overseeing the reintegration of citizens repatriated from Syria. The continued attention to this process points to a clear understanding that return alone does not settle the matter, and that sustained institutional involvement is necessary to ensure that individuals are able to re-enter society with clarity, support, and due regard for their circumstances.

I would also like to congratulate Hon'ble Mr. Hassan Tariq (Mediator of Morocco and OICOA Board Member) for convening a meeting in Rabat which brought together representatives from public institutions, academia, and civil society to discuss administrative governance and citizen interaction with state structures. This kind of initiative moves the institution beyond individual case handling and places it within a broader conversation on how administration is experienced in practice.

I would like to acknowledge the engagement of the Ombudsman of Indonesia with the Danish Parliamentary Ombudsman on preventive mechanisms against torture. Such exchanges are important in keeping these safeguards under active consideration and in ensuring that they continue to be applied with care and seriousness. I also appreciate the inspections carried out by the Ombudsman of The Gambia in places of detention, where continued oversight remains essential. Both efforts speak to the importance of sustained attention in areas where the absence of scrutiny can have serious consequences.

Acknowledgement and praise is also in order for the Ombudsman of Mozambique, Hon'ble Mr. Isaque Chande, for engaging with ambassadors to address issues faced by Mozambican citizens residing abroad. Such meetings are not routine formalities; they require persistence and a clear sense of purpose, particularly where administrative concerns extend across jurisdictions. I appreciate the attention given to these matters, as they often involve individuals who are at a distance from their own institutions and depend on such engagement to have their concerns taken forward.

I would also like to acknowledge the ruling of Pakistan's Federal Ombudsperson for Protection against Harassment (FOSPAH) declaring restrictions on renting accommodation to "bachelors" or single individuals as unlawful. By taking up a practice that has long limited access to housing without clear legal grounds, the decision addresses a concern that affects a wide segment of the public. I appreciate the clarity brought to this issue, particularly in setting out that such exclusions cannot stand where they conflict with established rights and legal protections.

The contributions brought together in this issue cover a range of settings and concerns, each offering a closer look at how institutions are addressing the matters before them. I hope it will be read with interest, and that readers may find in these accounts ideas and approaches worth considering in their own work. I look forward to the initiatives that will continue to emerge in the months ahead, and to the opportunity of learning from one another through this shared exchange.

With warm regards

Almas Ali Jovindah
EXECUTIVE SECRETARY (OICOA)

Hon’ble Hassan Tariq Presents the Annual Report 2024 to the Parliament: Highlights Rising Demand for Mediation and Greater Administrative Accountability

The Mediator of the Kingdom of Morocco and OICOA Board Member, Hon’ble Hassan Tariq, addressed the House of Representatives of Morocco on 28th January during a dedicated session to present and discuss the 2024 annual report of the Institution of the Mediator, emphasizing that Morocco’s institutional and political environment increasingly supports the development of administrative and facilitated mediation.

Mr. Tariq observed that public administration now stands at the intersection of social demands and public policy implementation, with citizens increasingly viewing administrative bodies as the primary point of response to their socio-economic concerns. This dynamic, he explained, naturally generates tensions that underline the importance of mediation mechanisms capable of resolving disputes efficiently and fairly.

Statistical data presented in the report showed a continued rise in mediation requests during 2024. A total of 7,948 files were registered, of which 5,755 were formal complaints, representing 72.41 percent of the caseload. Administrative matters accounted for the largest share (2,325 files), followed by financial disputes (1,761) and real estate cases (926). Together, these categories constituted more than 87 percent of all complaints received.

The Institution processed 5,774 complaint files during the year, compared with 5,448 in 2023, in addition to 2,182 guidance and advisory cases and ten requests for amicable settlement. Mr. Tariq emphasized that the handling of complaints, guidance, and friendly settlements forms the core of the Institution’s constitutional and legal mandate. The report also evaluated the responsiveness of public administrations through measurable indicators, including implementation of recommendations, compliance with settlement decisions, financial redress outcomes, and response times.

Mediator of the Kingdom Hassan Tariq Meets Parliamentary Subcommittee to Discuss Implementation of Participatory Democracy Laws

On 21st January, the Mediator of Morocco and OICOA Board Member, Hon’ble Mr. Hassan Tariq, received members of a newly established parliamentary subcommittee from the House of Representatives of Morocco at the headquarters of the Institution of the Mediator to discuss the implementation of Regulatory Laws No. 44.14 and 64.14 governing legislative petitions and motions.

The delegation was chaired by Saeed Baaziz, Chair of the Justice, Legislation and Human Rights Committee, and included the Committee’s Deputy Chair and several members of parliament. The meeting formed part of the subcommittee’s mandate to assess the practical application of participatory democracy mechanisms and identify challenges in their operationalization.

Discussions focused on the experience of legislative petitions submitted at the national level. According to the Committee, fifteen petitions have been filed to date, of which only a limited number have met the admissibility criteria. Members noted that this situation highlights procedural and regulatory constraints that may require a review of the existing legal and institutional framework to ensure broader and more effective civic participation.

During the exchange, Mr. Tariq presented the Moroccan experience in participatory democracy, emphasizing that it complements rather than replaces representative democracy. He underlined that dialogue, consultation, and structured engagement with civil society constitute essential components of democratic governance. He further noted that Parliament has already adopted several consultative practices, including hearings, study days, and stakeholder meetings, while institutions such as the Mediator continue to promote citizen participation through public dialogue and accessible complaint mechanisms. The meeting concluded with an exchange of views on possible legal and procedural improvements aimed at strengthening participatory tools and enhancing citizens’ involvement in the management of public affairs.

Mediator of Morocco and Moroccan People’s University Convene Dialogue in Rabat on Democratic Governance and Citizen-Centred Administration

In his address, Mr. Hassan Tariq stated that the meeting forms part of an ongoing partnership with the Moroccan People’s University, initiated in September 2025, reflecting a shared commitment to establishing a sustained space for intellectual exchange and constructive public dialogue between institutional actors and civil society. He noted that the event carries particular significance as it inaugurates the Institution’s 2026 programme of activities, designated as the “Year of Facilitated Mediation,” marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of institutional mediation in Morocco and following the designation of 9 December as the National Day of Facilitated Mediation.

Mr. Tariq further observed that the Mediator Institution occupies a distinctive position at the intersection of legal norms and administrative practice. He explained that its constitutional mandate, grounded in the protection of rights and the promotion of integrity and transparency, requires active engagement in public debate and knowledge-sharing initiatives. In this regard, he emphasized that thoughtful governance and open dialogue are indispensable to improving the management of public services and strengthening citizens’ confidence in public administration.

He noted that one of the central public priorities of the current administration is the establishment of a clean and corruption-free government, urging public institutions to adopt the Integrity Zone framework as a practical benchmark for strengthening transparency and improving service standards.

Mr. Najih explained that the designation of an Integrity Zone represents formal recognition that an institution has implemented governance principles consistent with the objectives of the Constitution, particularly those related to the provision of accountable and citizen-oriented public services. “Integrity is not merely expressed through statements or commitments,” he stated, “but through consistency between words and actions.”

The Plan prioritizes a results-oriented approach, with a focus on increasing conviction and asset recovery rates, strengthening compliance across government institutions, and enhancing investigative capacity through digital, forensic, and analytical tools. It also places emphasis on restoring public confidence in governance systems and improving Uganda’s standing on corruption perception indices.

Lady Justice Batala stressed that the Strategic Plan represents more than a policy framework, describing it as a clear institutional commitment to enforce accountability “without fear or favour” and to build a more transparent and corruption-resilient public sector.

As part of efforts to reinforce coordination between regional offices, the Mediator's Delegates for the Tchologo and Poro regions jointly held a working meeting with the management of the Sucrerie d'Afrique Côte d'Ivoire (SUCAF-CI).

During the session, the Delegates presented the mandate, jurisdiction, and complaint mechanisms of the Mediator of the Republic, providing participants with a clearer understanding of the institution's role in addressing administrative grievances and promoting social cohesion.

They also commended SUCAF-CI for its civic engagement, particularly its role in helping manage the 2018 tensions between members of the Baptist Church and initiates of the Poro community. The Director General of SUCAF-CI welcomed the initiative, noting that the interaction had enhanced staff awareness of the Mediator's functions. He further emphasized that the company maintains internal mechanisms to manage disputes effectively, ensuring that potential conflicts are addressed promptly to preserve a stable and harmonious working environment.

Beyond a routine institutional exchange, the meeting underscored a practical convergence between public mediation and corporate responsibility. It highlighted that social stability is not sustained by formal mechanisms alone, but through continuous, often informal, coordination between institutions and local actors. By opening a direct line of engagement with a major private-sector entity such as SUCAF-CI, the Mediator's Office reinforced its role not only as a forum for redress, but as a preventive presence within the social fabric, attuned to emerging tensions and responsive to the realities on the ground.

Speaking during the session, Mr. Séka first outlined the mandate of the Mediator of the Republic before turning to the central theme. He described disinformation as a deliberate act aimed at misleading or manipulating public perception, warning that its spread poses a tangible threat to social cohesion. He noted that the institution’s response is largely preventive, relying on awareness campaigns, targeted training, and continuous engagement with local structures, including monitoring committees, administrative authorities, traditional leaders, and youth organizations.

He further emphasized the need for practical understanding, highlighting the use of simulation exercises in training to help participants identify and respond to false information in real-world contexts. Concluding the discussion, Mr. Séka urged the public to exercise caution, particularly when confronted with emotionally charged content, and to verify information before sharing it, while stressing that, in an era shaped by rapidly evolving digital tools, including artificial intelligence, misinformation can easily be manipulated and taken out of context with serious consequences for community harmony.

FEDERAL OMBUDSPERSON FOR PROTECTION AGAINST HARASSMENT

FOSPAH Declares ‘No Bachelors’ Housing Bans Illegal in Landmark Ruling

In a landmark decision, Pakistan’s Federal Ombudsman for Protection against Harassment (FOSPAH) has declared housing restrictions that bar “bachelors” or single individuals as illegal, unconstitutional, and void from the outset.

The ruling holds that denying accommodation on the basis of marital status or gender violates fundamental rights, including equality, dignity, and freedom of residence. It addresses a widespread practice that has long limited access to housing for single professionals, often without any legal basis.

The decision is expected to have particular impact for working women, who frequently face disproportionate barriers in securing accommodation due to discriminatory practices. By recognizing such exclusions as rights violations, the Ombudsman has set a clear legal position against informal but entrenched housing restrictions. The ruling reinforces the principle that access to housing cannot be conditioned on personal status and signals a broader push toward ensuring safer, fairer, and more inclusive living and working environments.

 FEDERAL BANKING OMBUDSMAN OF PAKISTAN

Federal Banking Ombudsman Orders MCB to Refund Rs 3.05 Million in Fraud Case Involving Branch Manager

The Federal Banking Ombudsman of Pakistan and OICOA Member, Hon’ble Mr. Sirajuddin Aziz has directed Muslim Commercial Bank (MCB) to refund Rs. 3.05 million to a customer after establishing that a branch manager was involved in fraudulent withdrawals and misappropriation of funds.

According to the Ombudsman’s findings, the branch manager, identified as Mr. Saeed Arif, had access to customer cheques and used them to carry out unauthorized transactions. The investigation revealed that he submitted fake term deposit applications, issued cheques in the names of customers without their consent, and diverted funds for personal use. The inquiry further found that funds received through banking instruments were credited to an account belonging to the manager’s nephew instead of the rightful customer. The account was reportedly operated by the branch manager himself, raising serious concerns about internal controls and oversight within the bank. The case also noted that an FIR had been registered against the official and that disciplinary action had been taken against certain staff members. Invoking its statutory powers, the Banking Mohtasib ordered MCB to credit the full amount of Rs. 3.05 million, along with applicable service charges, to the complainant’s account. The bank has also been directed to submit a compliance report. The ruling reinforces the principle that banks are responsible for the actions of their employees when acting in the course of their duties, particularly in cases involving customer funds and trust.

The discussion focused on practical coordination between federal and provincial bodies to ensure more responsive and efficient service delivery.

Both sides also approached the meeting from a wider institutional lens, not just bilateral coordination. As members of the OIC Ombudsman Association, the discussion also carried an implicit focus on how national ombudsman offices can operate with greater consistency, particularly in handling complaints that cut across jurisdictions and sectors and are inline with best international practices of OICOA Member Institutions. The conversation also fed into the ongoing work of the Forum of Pakistan Ombudsman, where the emphasis has been on making redress systems less fragmented and more usable for citizens of Pakistan.

Limited and employees of other developmental sectors.

The session brought together individuals from both the private and public sectors, reflecting a deliberate effort to move beyond isolated compliance and build a broader understanding of workplace conduct standards. Rather than treating harassment as a procedural issue, the discussion focused on how workplace environments are shaped by everyday behavior, reporting culture, and institutional response.

Participants were taken through the legal framework governing harassment, with particular attention to how complaints are handled in practice, the responsibilities of management, and the protections available to complainants. The training also addressed common gaps, especially the reluctance to report incidents and the tendency of organizations to treat such matters informally rather than through structured mechanisms.

The workshop formed part of a wider outreach approach by the Ombudsman's office, aimed at embedding awareness directly within workplaces where such issues arise. By engaging corporate entities alongside public sector participants, the initiative sought to establish a more consistent understanding of standards across sectors, where differences in policy often lead to uneven enforcement.

The initiative is designed to reduce the distance between citizens and public institutions, particularly in areas where access to formal channels remains limited.

The visit holds particular importance for underprivileged and underserved communities, many of whom face practical and financial barriers in pursuing complaints through conventional means. By taking services directly to such populations, the programme enables individuals who might otherwise remain unheard to raise their concerns and seek timely redress.

The Awaami Khidmat Programme continues to serve as a key component of the Ombudsman’s outreach strategy, focusing on direct engagement and improved access to justice across Punjab.

Ombudsman of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Suspends Salaries of Senior Officials Over Non-Compliance in Public Complaint Cases

Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Ombudsman and OICOA Member, Hon’ble Mr. Muttahir Zeb, has taken strict action against senior government officials for failing to comply with directives issued in connection with public complaints, ordering the suspension of their salaries with immediate effect.

The action follows repeated notices and clear instructions that were ignored by the concerned officers. Those affected include the Director General Health Services, Chief Engineer (Centre) of the Communication and Works (C&W) Department, Director of Social Welfare, Special Education and Women Empowerment, and a Section Officer of the Health Department.

According to the Ombudsman’s office, the officials neither submitted the required compliance reports nor appeared for hearings despite multiple opportunities. The conduct was deemed a serious lapse in official responsibility and a direct impediment to the timely resolution of citizens’ grievances.

Under the Ombudsman’s orders, the salaries will remain suspended until the concerned officers submit complete compliance reports. The move is aimed at enforcing accountability within public institutions and ensuring that complaint redressal mechanisms function without delay. The action sends a clear signal that disregard for lawful directives and negligence in addressing public complaints will attract firm consequences, particularly where it affects citizens’ access to administrative justice.

Appeal of the Commissioner for Human Rights of the Republic of Azerbaijan (Ombudsman) on the safety of children in the digital environment

According to research conducted by the Office of the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of the Republic of Azerbaijan, the risks posed by online games and interactive platforms that have become widespread among children in recent years, particularly the "Roblox" platform, are a cause for serious concern. These days, the risks that kids face in the digital world are more than just a technological issue but have become a serious problem that must be assessed from the human rights perspective.

Children using the platform in question are directly subjected to psychological manipulation in addition to being exposed to technical concerns, according to the observations conducted, materials published in the media, and expert opinions. In particular, bullying (pressure, insults, and social exclusion), grooming (the practice of gradually gaining children's trust in order to manipulate them), emotional abuse, and behaviors aimed at creating fear and dependency are among the widespread and dangerous trends. Such forms of psychological manipulation can lead to reduced self-confidence in children, stress, anxiety, fear, behavioral disorders, and long-term psychological trauma, resulting in serious violations of children's rights.

This issue has been recognized as a serious problem not only at the national level but also internationally. A number of states, including China, Russia, Türkiye, Jordan, Qatar, Oman, Iraq, and other countries, have banned or restricted the "Roblox" platform precisely because of the risks involved. These states cite the presence of inappropriate content and forms of interaction for children on the platform, the spread of unacceptable and extremist materials among minors, and concerns about children's safety.

Thus, the formal application of age restrictions on digital platforms designed for children, the absence of effective content moderation mechanisms, deficiencies in the protection of personal data, and exposure to financial manipulation risks lead to violations of children's rights.

According to the Constitution of the Republic of Azerbaijan, the State oversees the implementation of children's rights and provides special protection for the family as the fundamental unit of society. Under the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan "On the Rights of the Child," every child has the right to life and to physical, intellectual, and moral development under normal conditions, and the State agrees to put in place the economic, social, legal, and other measures necessary to ensure these conditions and to create a healthy and safe environment.

Under the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan "On the Protection of Children from Harmful Information," the fundamental principles for protecting children from harmful information are the best interests of the child, the protection of their rights and freedoms, the prevention of the circulation of harmful information products, including violations of children's rights committed through the use of information technologies, and other specified principles.

Considering the aforementioned, I urge the appropriate state authorities to take the required steps to guarantee children's digital safety, including bolstering oversight procedures over online platforms, carrying out legal evaluations of related dangers, and putting preventive measures into place.

Addressing parents (or those acting in their place), I should stress the importance of keeping a close eye on how kids use digital platforms, putting parental control mechanisms in place, communicating with kids in an honest and trustworthy manner, and educating them about potential hazards they might face in the virtual world.

It is essential that media outlets and journalists act responsibly on this issue, keeping the best interests of children and the protection of their rights at the forefront, while helping the public receive accurate information.

As the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of the Republic of Azerbaijan, I once again stress the significance of children's safety in the digital sphere and urge the relevant authorities and civil society organizations to take the appropriate measures in this regard to jointly achieve more effective protection of children's rights.

STATEMENT of the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of the Republic of Azerbaijan on the 36th anniversary of the January 20, 1990 tragedy

36 years have passed since the military intervention carried out by the armed forces of the former USSR against the civilian population on the night of January 19-20, 1990, with the aim of violently suppressing the national will and demands for independence of the Azerbaijani people.

As a result of this bloody incident committed against humanity, the provisions of the UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as other international legal documents on human rights were grossly violated. The January 20 tragedy, which resulted in massive losses, is one of the most terrible crimes committed in the 20th century due to its nature and scale.

That night, as a result of the disproportionate use of military force against the civilian and unarmed population in Baku and other regions of the republic, 150 civilians were killed and 744 were injured. As a result, along with international law, the relevant provisions of the constitutions of the former USSR and the Azerbaijan SSR were grossly violated, and our multinational people, who had risen to defend their lands and national identity, were brutally massacred.

The use of military force against civilians, without warning and without a real threat to life and health, is unacceptable under international human rights law and is considered a violation of the absolute rights that states must observe even in emergency situations. In this regard, the events of January 20 confirm a serious violation of international law.

At that time, the most serious statement was made by the Great Leader of our people, Heydar Aliyev, who lived in Moscow, on behalf of the Azerbaijani people. Despite the pressures and personal security risks, on January 21, 1990, the National Leader Heydar Aliyev, speaking to the press at the Permanent Representation of Azerbaijan in Moscow, openly condemned this grave crime committed against the civilian population and declared that it was directly the responsibility of the former USSR leadership. This was of great historical importance in terms of giving the first political and legal assessment of the January 20 tragedy.

At the same time, the failure of the international community and relevant international organizations to give these events the necessary political and legal assessment at that time resulted in a violation of the principles of international justice and created a climate of impunity. The failure to respond in a timely and principled manner to massive and grave violations within the framework of the UN human rights mechanisms created a favorable environment for other serious crimes against human rights in the region in the subsequent stages.

As the Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) of the Republic of Azerbaijan, I would like to emphasize that an objective and comprehensive investigation of the January 20 tragedy from the perspective of international law, the recognition of these events as crimes against humanity, as well as ensuring the legal accountability of not only the perpetrators, but also all responsible persons who participated in the decision-making process, is necessary in terms of restoring justice.

In this regard, I invite international organizations, especially relevant UN mechanisms, to demonstrate a principled position, to cooperate jointly in order to bring to justice those who committed the January 20 events, and to give an international legal assessment to this bloody action.

The dear memory of the martyrs of January 20 will always live in the memory of the Azerbaijani people.

ENGLISH POLITICS ECONOMY SOCIETY CULTURE SPORTS MENA INTERNATIONAL MEDIAMorocco's Mediator hails improved ties between parliament and governance bodies Wednesday 28 January 2026 - 22:47

Morocco's Mediator, Hassan Tariq, said on Wednesday that relations between parliament and governance bodies have improved markedly, after years he described as marked by tension and weak cooperation.

Speaking to the justice committee in the House of Representatives, Tariq said his view of the relationship had changed, praising current coordination with the committee and pointing to what he called a new momentum among governance institutions.

He warned that the state cannot function as isolated islands and said competition over legitimacy between governance bodies and elected institutions should not turn into a rupture.

Tariq said his earlier assessment was shaped by his experience as a lawmaker and his role in drafting the chamber's internal rules, which were designed to organise new institutional links with governance bodies.

He added that the Mediator institution's report, examined on Wednesday, was for the first time submitted and presented within the legal deadline, which he said showed the relationship is not destined to fail.

He also highlighted a circular issued by the head of government on 13 October 2025, calling it an instruction to public administrations to strengthen cooperation with the Mediator. The circular urges ministries, local authorities and public bodies to appoint qualified liaison officers, respond to delays and implement recommendations to improve amicable dispute resolution and rebuild trust in public services.

The Kingdom’s Mediator Warns of New Administrative Tensions and Affirms the Necessity of Governance Recommendations

In Politics - January 29, 2026 - By Express TV

The Mediator of the Kingdom has warned of escalating administrative tensions concerning the implementation of the state’s social policies, emphasizing that governance recommendations are inherently binding and must be applied by administrations or justified legally and practically for non-implementation.

Hassan Tariq, during his interaction with responses from parliament members at a study day organized by the Justice, Legislation, and Human Rights Committee in the House of Representatives, noted that the institution receives daily complaints related to the implementation of social programs, particularly in health coverage, which has equipped its staff with practical experience in diagnosing implementation issues.

He recorded a positive response from some partnering sectors, including the Prime Minister’s Office, the Ministry of Economy and Finance, the Social Security Fund, and CNSS, highlighting that the institution has successfully uncovered structural imbalances in multiple individual cases.

The Mediator pointed out a dual crisis observed in 2024, relating to the design of certain government programs on one hand, and the weak communication with beneficiaries and multiple stakeholders on the other hand. He noted that some mediation files took different paths and came under private law.

Tariq affirmed that Morocco is facing a new generation of administrative tensions that risk turning into social tensions, asserting that the institution’s annual report serves as both defense and advocacy for proactive management based on dialogue, participation, and communication between the administration and citizens.

He criticized the prevailing understanding of the concept of “recommendation,” clarifying that it is not merely a suggestion but a legal conclusion reached by the institution after evaluating the justifications of the concerned administration, stressing the necessity of addressing it.

He also warned that complaints should reflect the imbalances of public services, confirming that recommendations contribute to holding public policies accountable, and that utilizing them in parliamentary contexts aligns with the institution’s neutrality within the public sphere.

FOSPAH declares ‘bachelors’ housing ban illegal, unconstitutional

Islamabad: In a landmark ruling with wide-ranging implications for the housing sector, the Federal Ombudsperson for Protection against Harassment of Women at the Workplace (FOSPAH) has ruled that denying residential accommodation to unmarried men or women is unlawful, discriminatory and unconstitutional, finding no legal basis for such practices under the country's tenancy laws or constitutional framework.

The ruling came on the complaint of Sana Humayun Khan, a working woman employed with a national media organisation, who alleged sustained harassment and coercive conduct by the management of a private residential building in Islamabad.

According to FOSPAH, despite residing peacefully with her sister and fully complying with tenancy terms, the complainant was repeatedly pressured to vacate her residence on the pretext that “bachelors cannot live here.”

It took notice of allegations that electricity and water supplies were disconnected as coercive measures to force eviction and that informal, unwritten “policies” rooted in gender stereotypes were being enforced without any lawful authority.

Although the individual complaint was resolved following assurances by the building management, FOSPAH said it was necessary to address the broader and systemic discrimination faced by working women and unmarried professionals across urban centers.

Leave for fathers on child birth declared mandatory

ISLAMABAD: The Federal Ombudsperson for Protection Against Harassment (FOSPAH) has ruled that fathers are entitled to paternity leave following the birth of a child, emphasising that childcare is not solely a woman's responsibility.

The decision comes after a complaint by a bank officer, whose request for 30 days of paternity leave was denied.

Syed Basit Ali, an OG-1 working in Banking Services Corporation – a subsidiary of State Bank of Pakistan, filed a complaint against the governor, managing director, HRMD Head, and chief manager.

In his complaint, he noted that upon the birth of his son, he applied for thirty (30) days' paternity leave under Section 4 of the Maternity and Paternity Leave Act, 2023.

However, according to the report, his request was declined on the grounds that no such leave existed under the prevailing policy of SBP.

In the order, Fauzia Waqar – Federal Ombudsperson for Protection against Harassment of Women at Workplace – directed the central to grant the officer full salary along with 30 days of paternity leave.

The ombudsperson also imposed a fine of Rs0.5 million on the State Bank, of which Rs 400,000 shall be paid to the complainant, and the remaining Rs100,000 shall be deposited into the government exchequer within 30 days.
